

The Problem

The devastating loss of life by overdose — more than one million Americans dead — is made even more tragic because each of these deaths was entirely preventable.

The federal government can act now to prevent overdose deaths and ensure that there is “no wrong door” for people seeking treatment for substance use disorder.

Our Mission

We believe that each overdose death is preventable, comprehensive support for substance use disorder is within reach, and increases in overdose deaths are not a foregone conclusion

By advancing federal policies that address the disparities, inequities, and stigma in the SUD treatment system, we can make a difference in the lives of people across the U.S. and prevent overdose deaths.

We advocate for policies that:

- 1 Expand access to substance use disorder treatment
- 2 Eliminate barriers to medications for opioid use disorder
- 3 Fund harm reduction approaches to substance use
